Food Waste Explained

Food waste is often overlooked in the climate change debate, but in fact, it's a major contributor responsible for 8-10% of global greenhouse gas emissions. That's more than the entire aviation sector! But there's good news, reducing food waste is one of the most impactful ways to take climate action – and you can start today in the kitchen! Watch our Food Waste Explained animation to see what you can do.

CSIRO - The challenge of ending food waste and food insecurity in Australia

Key points

- Food waste and food insecurity are growing challenges for Australia.
- A third of all the food we produce in Australia, 7.6 million tonnes per year, is currently going to waste.
- Adopting a circular approach for our food systems means we could reuse food waste for innovative products.
